A Planning Guide to Assist My Family

General Information

As Christians, we can look forward with joy and anticipation to the day when our Lord will call us home to Himself in heaven. We can know for certain that heaven is ours through faith in Christ's atonement for our sins on the cross. Thus, we are most certainly "spiritually" prepared for our death.

Unfortunately, many people are not prepared for their death in terms of the preparations that are necessary for the funeral and its arrangements. This little booklet will help you consider these details and provide you with a means of sharing that information with your loved ones, your pastor, and the funeral director of your choice. In fact, it is good for you to give a copy of this booklet, with the necessary information to your pastor, your funeral director, and several family members and friends of your choice.

Planning now for your funeral is important. We make plans for many things in life. Some we are never able to do. Yet death and burial are inevitable, and thus it is crucial that we also plan for it. Planning does not hasten the event.

Funeral pre-planning is necessary, first of all, as a means to let your wishes be known to all concerned.

Secondly, pre-planning your funeral enables you to give expression to your faith through choosing and ordering what is to take place.

Also, it eases the burden on your loved ones by eliminating the pressure of decision-making, particularly the need of trying to do things "the way you would have wished." By writing them down, the possibility is gone that your loved ones, because of their grief, may forget your desires.

Finally, pre-planning will give you a certain amount of peace, knowing that your affairs are in order.

Consider discussing your plans with your pastor and your funeral director. You will want not only their assurance that your plans are appropriate, but also their cooperation in respecting them at your death.

If at all possible, discuss these plans with your loved ones. Allow them to participate in the planning and express their thoughts. This brings the subject out into the open and provides loved ones with an opportunity to openly share their love and sorrow--best shared now, rather than after a death occurs.

Please bear in mind that the more complex and complete your plans become, the more tentative they must be. The events surrounding your death, or events that may occur between now and the time of your death, may necessitate changes. Therefore, from time to time, every several years, the plans in this booklet may need to be updated. As you consider your death, burial and life everlasting, may the Lord bless you.

Funeral Hymns and Scripture Readings

Hymns and readings of the Church Year could prescribe helpful thoughts for the planning of this service. The events surrounding your death may also have an effect in changing its character.

It is therefore suggested that you choose several different scripture readings. You may wish to choose at least one hymn in each of the hymn categories listed. This will enable selection to be made, no matter what the circumstances, that will be in accord with your wishes. It may also be good if you were to list as a "must" perhaps one hymn and one scripture reading that will be used no matter what.

As with any service of worship, the pastor, in cooperation with the music director, is charged with the responsibility of final planning of the funeral service. However, you may be assured that they will take your desires fully into account.

A listing of possible funeral hymns and scripture readings follow below.
